

C-HACK Code of Conduct

Our priority is to make C-HACK a safe and welcoming space for everyone involved, regardless of age, sexual orientation, gender identity, disability, physical appearance, body size, race, ethnicity, nationality, religion, socio-economic status, or veteran status. Any form of behavior that conflicts with such expectations will not be tolerated. Instead, we encourage everyone to:

- Be respectful
- Be considerate
- Practice patience - especially during both the tutorials and the project
- Behave professionally

For all participants, please remember to:

- Be respectful of other participants, team members, and presenters
- Only unmute during allotted times of virtual activities - such as tutorials, team meetings, and other C-HACK events - where appropriate.

Inappropriate behavior towards any C-HACK members - including, but not limited to, participants, committee members, tutorial instructors, and sponsors - is considered a violation of our Code of Conduct and will result in disciplinary action deemed appropriate by the Chemical Engineering department, as well as possible intervention from the UW Student Conduct office for undergraduate and graduate students.

Examples of unacceptable behavior at C-HACK include, but not limited to:

- Harassment of C-HACK members in any form:
 - Verbal intimidation, insults, or threats
 - Language deemed offensive, discriminatory, or exclusionary
 - Sharing personal information, screenshots, images, videos, code, etc, of others without their permission
- Unwelcome comments or inappropriate advances in any communication channel, such as Zoom and Slack
- Disrupting tutorials, committee meetings, team workshops, etc. with offensive imagery and/or videos

This Code of Conduct applies to all members of C-HACK, and all events during C-HACK.

Report any inappropriate behavior or violation of the Code of Conduct to:
